WARNS AGITATION MAY BRING ON WAR

Senator Newlands Sees Analagy Between Demands on Wilson and McKinley.

HISTORIC INCIDENTS OF 1898 REVEALED taxed to its capacity.

Nevada Statesman Shows How President Was Practically Forced to Act in Cuba.

made upon President Wilson by republican members of Congress to inter upon President McKinley by the democrats just before the Spanish-American war. He said:

"Just before the Cuban war I happened to be a member of the House of Representatives and a member of the committee on foreign affairs. At that time the country was excited with reference to the condition of Cuba. An election was approaching, and the party of which I was a member was then engaged in somewhat the same form of attack upon Mr. McKinley as is now being indulged in by the republican party upon Mr. Wilson.

Action of Democrats.

was embarrassed by the conderation of numerous resolutions pre the House of Representatives garding the recognition of belligerent ights and other matters of that kind, recall that at a conference of the emocrats of the House the question name up as to whether this mode of ttack was proper and would be fruit-erate methods, the President finally amounced that he would deliver a mesage to Congress upon the Cuban situa The House of Representatives met in expectancy of that message Business was suspended; the atmos phere was surcharged with electricity contentions arose on the floor, in one two cases leading almost to physica while they were awaiting the philosophically viewing the scene and wondering at the turbelance of a so-called deliberative body the sergeant-at-arms informed me that the President desired to see me at the White House. I went there, and in the anteroom found two other democrats, minority members of the foreign affairs committee. We were immediately ushered nto the President's office. He sat there at a table, upon which lay a document tied with red ribbon, evidently the message which he was about to send to Congress. I could not but contrast the calm and the dignity of that room and of the President himself with the scene of turbulence which I had just left. He informed us that he had just received a telegram from Consul General Lee at Havana advising him that Havana was in a state of high exthat Havana was in a state of high ex-citement with reference to his antici-pated message; that there were 500 Americans in Havana whom he wished to send back to this country before that message was announced, and ask-ing him to postpone its delivery.

Decide Against Submission.

Mr. McKinley stated that the country expected this message upon that day and that Congress expected it: that he could not announce to the country he could not announce to the country the cause of postponement, for if the telegram were published it might produce in Havana the same effect that might be produced by the anticipated presidential message. He said that he had therefore called us, as members of the minority and adversary party, to ask our judgment regarding the situation. We told him that we thought the message ought to be postponed. He replied that he thought so, too; that he would rather lose his right arm, as He replied that he thought so, too; that he would rather lose his right arm, as he expressed it, than run the risk of losing a single American life, but that he was unable to make any public statement regarding the matter, and he requested us to pass around without publicity among our associates on the floor of the House and state that the President of the United States had taken us into his confidence and had presented to us good reasons for the postponement of the message. We assured him that we would do so, and sured him that we would do so, and we thought the undertaking an easy one, but when we arrived at the House we found the urbulence of that body increased, not diminished.

Flood of Denunciation.

"Word had been passed around that we had been sent for and the purpose was suspected. The result was a flood of denunciation, particularly from the so-called 'insurgent' members of the republican party, some of whom, in my republican party, some of whom, in my hearing, upon our return to that body, when we were passing around, in a rather ineffective way, stating the result of our communication with Mr. McKinley, denounced him as a man without a backbone or with a rubber backbone. I have often since then thought of the contrast between the quiet and the calm of the President and the excitement of a so-called deliberative and representative body."

Two Held for Grand Jury. Benjamin Butler and Daniel Ander son, colored, charged with robbery were held for the action of the grand jury in $10,000 bonds each today in the Police Court. The men, who are al-leged to have held up and robbed Al-fred Hickman of 417 O street north-west of $19.28, entered a plea of not guilty and waived preliminary examin-ation.

The senator, who was a member of the House committee on foreign affairs at the time of the Spanish war, told a hitherto unpublished incident of the days immediately preceding the declaration of war. Senator Newlands warned the Senate that too much agitation now may result in war today, just as it did in 1898, declaring that Tresident McKinley was driven into war. He said:

no less a dignitary than Judge George Fleming Moore, sovereign grand comnander of the Scottish Rite for the gate, Prof. Julius Kamper, R. M. Thomregarding the recognition of belligerent rights and other matters of that kind. I recall that at a conference of the democrats of the House the question came up as to whether this mode of attack was proper and would be fruitful of results. I ventured then to inquire whether the democratic party wished to get into war, and I was assured that it did not; that it was a mere question of party tactics; that the commencement and the maintenance of a war pending a national campaign would insure the retention in power of the dominant party. My reply was: Then this resolution will drive this administration into war. An answer came back from a prominent democratithat the republican party could not be kicked into war. That mode of attack went on; disaffection increased in the republican party; in the northwest particularly the sentiment was intense, and republicans felt that their seats were in danger at the approaching election. They formed an organization called the insurgents, and called upon the President with reference to the pending situation and insisted that the administration should take decisive action.

Maximum Weight of Vehicles.

That the maximum weight of wheeled vehicles permitted on the bridge be three tons for animal-drawn vehicles, exclusive of the animal, and four-tons for motor vehicles.

That police supervision be had to prevent excessive overloading of the bridge by traffic at any time.

That during periods of heavy ice movement in the river all traffic over the bridge be suspended.

In his report to the War Department Col. Flagler said: "I consider the situation as one demanding serious and immediate consideration. I believe that the reduction of traffic recommended, with a careful observance of movement in the piers, will render the bridge reasonably safe until next spring, but still not devoid of danger."

Various sites for the new bridge have been proposed, among them a site just above the present bridge, at the foot of 34th street, foot of H street and extending from the Lincoln memorial to Arlington.

It may be authoritatively stated that the Commissioners Brownlow to day said that he would favor the Virginia terminus of the bridge being retained at Rosslyn, but thought the Washington terminus should be moved slightly eastward in order to give direct access to a street extending north and south. The present arrangement gives direct access only to an east and west street.

Condition of the Bridge. In describing some of the conditions ound in the recent examination of the ridge Col. Flagler said: "The examinations have shown gradual deterioration of the piers below the water line. The defects appear in the form of cavities caused by the dropping out during freshets of one or more of the stones in or near the face; also by the scouring out of the riprap under the edges of the foundations, and the washing out of mortar between the joints.

"The defects reported this year are areas of face, with open joints, which can be penetracted with a steel rod as much as four feet; large cavifies, with loose tock fallen from the filling of the piers, which appears to have little coherence, and scour under the edges of the masonry.
